Alliance Cost Containment Helps Small Businesses Achieve Savings Through Cutting Costs and Not People

March 1, 2010 – During these rough economic times, businesses across the country are trying many different ways to save money. Whether it's in technology, office operations or general consultations with CFOs, Alliance Cost Containment, a cost control company with 20 offices in the U.S. and Mexico, works with small to medium sized businesses to figure out the best ways to save money.

ACC, works a variety of including, convenience stores, healthcare organizations, non profits, law firms, banks, manufacturing companies and many other types of businesses in reviewing their procurement and operations process. Some clients include a regional franchise of Holiday Inns in Ohio, Evangelical health center in MI, Great Stops Convenience Stores in SC and the Georgia Military College.

More specifically, ACC has completed several projects that helped firms achieve savings in the following areas:

- Law firms saved 56% in landline telecom, 40% in office products, 35% in record storage and 26% in coffee and break room supplies.
- Commercial real estate firms saved 55% in messenger services and 30% in wireless telecom.
- Advertising agencies saved 31% in small parcel delivery and 27% in leased equipment maintenance.
- Membership service firms saved 22% in printing and promotional products.

Furthermore, Alliance Cost Containment provides easy-to-follow steps in cutting costs. Some pointers from the company include:

- Replace your incandescent with fluorescent.
- Check out solar or micro wind turbines for outside lights and closed circuit TV.
- Use laptops instead of desktops. They use a fraction of the power and your employees can work from home.
- Use free, open system software. For example, Google offers a free version as an alternative to Excel. Or buy your software on E-bay. You can get last year's version at steep discounts. "Businesses turn to Alliance Cost Containment as a way to make their companies run smoother and more efficiently. ACC is well-versed in the most up to date competencies as they pertain to cost savings. Many of our customers get quick results from us and see immediate revenue growth due to our efforts," said Miles Lee, president of Alliance Cost Containment.
